A former Memphis police officer pleaded guilty to official misconduct and official oppression today after he admitted forcing prostitutes to have sex with him while on duty and in uniform.

Daniel Wallace, 45, was one of four officers indicted last year on such charges and is the third to plead guilty in recent months in Criminal Court.

Wallace was sentenced to four years in prison, but will ask Judge John Colton Jr. for diversion or probation at a hearing next month. He remains free on bond.

Former officers Thomas Woods and James George also pleaded guilty to prostitute-related misconduct charges, while charges against ex-officer Larry Orange, 44, remain pending.

Woods, 55, is on judicial diversion until 2015 when his record will be cleared if he abides by court conditions.

George, 52, was sentenced to seven years in prison for forcing prostitutes to have sex with him in his squad car, but will ask Colton for diversion or probation in a hearing next month. He remains free on bond.
