Daniel Dana, 27, was in San Diego County Superior Court on probation by Judge John Dana was ordered to complete 12 hours of AIDS testing.

Several felony charges, including

A 35-year-old woman told the court she was on El Cajon Boulevard.

She said she was standing near the curb, tried to walk away because she saw a patrol car in front of her.

"I said, 'I know I'm not supposed to be here,'" she testified.

The woman said she gave Dana her cell phone number, and she thought of him as someone she could trust to warn her of police activity in prostitution areas.

Sometime later, the woman said Dana texted her from his Jacuzzi, saying he wished she could be there with him. She said she had no problem with the idea of having sex with a police officer as long as he paid.

On the night of May 10, 2011, the woman said she went downtown looking for clients because there was too much police activity on El Cajon Boulevard.

She said she went home, changed clothes and went back to work on El Cajon Boulevard.

Around 2:30 a.m., the woman said she got a text, then a call from Dana and eventually met up with him near a 7-Eleven.

The woman said she and Dana made small talk near the rear of his patrol car, then he demanded sex.

"He said either I give him what he wants or I go to jail," the woman testified.

The woman said Dana put her in the back of his patrol car, then drove to a dark part of Presidio Park in Old Town. She said Dana demanded oral sex, then had sexual intercourse with her.

After the encounter, the woman said she licked her fingers and wiped saliva on the front seat of Dana's patrol car to prove that she had been there.

Defense attorney William Wolfe said earlier that the victim routinely violated her probation by going out to work as a prostitute. Wolfe said the sex could have been consensual and called the woman's credibility into question.

Dana served four years in the Marine Corps and earned several medals, Wolfe said.

The defendant joined SDPD after being honorably discharged from the military in 2007. He left the department shortly after the encounter with the prostitute.

Obviously thinking with the wrong head, end of career end of life. I hate to think what his wife thinks about him now.

California is broke, yet prostitution and cannabis, both victimless crimes are still illegal. How stupid is that?

He made the same mistake those Secret Service agents made. All he had to do is give her her due...pay her. It's not like it would break him to pay. Couldn't blame it on intoxication other than the intoxicating lust for sex. But since he was already heading down the slippery slope (no pun intended), the outcome (no pun intended) was pre-ordained and his demise inevitable.

Obviously the powers that be did not find the hooker credible. Dana should be glad he got off with probation. His career is ruined forever and he will never find a decent job again. He made a mistake and will pay a heavy price. Most cops who get fired never recover and fail in life. It's that simple.

I will agree with if when you are being raped no cops come to your aid and you have to fend off the attacker on your own.

so this is what i learned from the story. don't go to el cajon blvd because there's too much police activity, so instead go to downtown (where most women look like hookers anyway). when someone licks their fingers for no apparent reason, wipe car seat down. and finally, i should go to denny's for a happy ending.
