The list of victims whom an Oklahoma City police lieutenant allegedly sexually assaulted over the past year has grown to include three more, including a 17-year-old girl, bringing the total to 13.

Daniel Ken Holtzclaw, who remains on paid leave as he sits at his parents' home on house arrest, faces multiple counts of first-degree rape that could send him to prison for life, but his attorney denies the 27-year-old has done anything wrong, The Oklahoman reported this week.

On Tuesday, Holtzclaw's family posted a statement to the "Justice for Daniel Holtzclaw" page, in light of new charges that were filed over the latest alleged victims.

"Once again, it appears nothing more than accusations from those with an ulterior motive," it said.

A former college football player, Holtzclaw was arrested in August following an investigation into allegations that he forced women whom he had threatened to arrest or physically harm to perform various sex acts while he was on patrol. The females ranged from ages 17 to 58 and included a 57-year-old grandmother who was allegedly forced to perform oral sex on him.

He was charged this week with three more counts of first-degree rape, two months after he charged with 16 felony counts including first-degree rape, sexual battery, indecent exposure, stalking, forcible oral sodomy and burglary. He also faces one count each of second-degree rape by instrumentation, forcible oral sodomy and sexual battery. In total, he faces 32 counts for various alleged offenses.

The three who most recently came forward reportedly did so after they saw him in the news for alleged crimes against other women.

In the case involving the 17-year-old, Holtzclaw reportedly approached the young girl on June 17 while she was out walking with friends in Oklahoma City. He told her there was a warrant out for her arrest but initially let her go.

He later allegedly found her, stopped her again and took her to her house where he groped her beneath her shirt and inserted his hand into her shorts and beneath her underwear while they were on her front porch. He then allegedly forced her to perform oral sex and engage in sexual intercourse with him, according to the affidavit cited in The Oklahoman.

One of the other new victims was reportedly stopped while she was out walking May 22 and forced to perform oral sex on Holtzclaw and have sex with him inside a car.

The third victim was allegedly pulled over April 25 and told by the lieutenant that she was going to a detox center, then taken to a different location where she was reportedly forced to perform oral sex and engage in intercourse with him.

Holtzclaw now faces a preliminary hearing Nov. 18 and remains on house arrest while wearing a GPS ankle bracelet. His bail was set at $609,000, reduced this
