Bono police chief jailed on suspicion of sexual misconduct

BONO -- Bono police chief Rick Duhon was arrested by Arkansas State Police Criminal Investigators Wednesday for alleged sexual misconduct with a teen-age girl, sources told The Sun.

Duhon, a 52-year-old former Craighead County jail administrator, was being held in the facility Wednesday night.

A formal court hearing is pending for Duhon today, the police source said.

State Police investigators executed a search warrant on Duhon's home Wednesday, and the veteran law man was taken into police custody shortly thereafter, the police source said.

Duhon was booked into to the Craighead County Detention Center about 3 p.m. Wednesday.

The Sun was told the alleged victim is a 14-year-old girl, and Arkansas State Police investigators received a tip about the incident on their child abuse hotline.

Police said they planned to seek charges of first-degree sexual assault at today's court hearing.
