DUNCAN, Okla. – The trial of former Stephens County Sheriff's Deputy Brandon Balthrop also ended in a mistrial Tuesday for virtually the same reason as the Dyer case.

Some of the jurors who sat on other panels last week were sent standard letters from the district attorney's office so the judge ruled they could impact the jurors.

Opening arguments in Balthrop's trial had also just begun. The 29 year old is accused of sexually assaulting women on the job, including two teenagers he pulled over.

Balthrop was dismissed from the sheriff's office in July 2010 and was formally charged a month later. He denies any wrongdoing.
