LUBBOCK, TX (KCBD) - The trial of a former Lubbock police officer scheduled to start Monday has once again been postponed and no new trial date has been set.

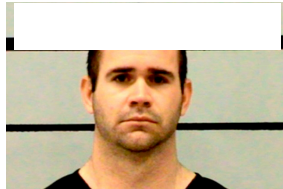

Jason Hignight, 32, was indicted in February of last year on two counts of sexual assault of a child.

Prosecutors say he sexually assaulted his adopted daughters, who were 12 and 16 at the time.

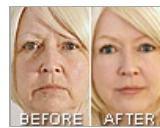

Hignight was also indicted in March of last year in a separate case after a woman came forward claiming that he raped her in 2007.
