WESTPORT, Mass. -- A Westport man pleads not guilty to a charge of child pornography after police said he secretly recorded a teenage relative using the bathroom in his home.

Police said Christopher Branco, 43, was charged with possession of child pornography. He was arraigned Monday in Fall River District Court. Branco was released on personal recognizance and is scheduled to be back in court in May.

Police said the video shows a 15-year-old female relative using the bathroom in Branco's home in 2000. Police said part of the video showed Branco setting up the camera.

According to police, Branco's wife found the tape in safe and gave it to investigators.

According to The Standard-Times, the prosecutor told the court Branco also had naked photos and several pairs of women's underwear in the safe.

The victim in the case told police what happened last month.

Branco is a police officer for Bristol Community College and a former police officer in Little Compton and Newport.

Finding several pairs of women's underwear in the safe is real bad. Many times, people kept stuff like that which use to belong to murder victims as a trophy.
