A Massachusetts woman allegedly drugged and molested an 8-year-old boy during sickening Skype sessions with a disgraced NYPD sergeant, the Daily News has learned.

The woman, whose name The News is withholding to protect the identity of the now-13-year-old victim, is the second woman charged with participating in the sexual exploitation of children with Sgt. Alberto Randazzo.

She was arrested Tuesday and ordered held without bail by a judge in Boston Federal Court. She will be extradited to Brooklyn, where Randazzo, 38, and another woman have been indicted for video sex with her 1-year-old.

Although Randazzo was arrested in 2013 by Internal Affairs Bureau investigators, the feds only recently discovered the Massachusetts connection, sources said.

Several computers were seized from Randazzo's apartment in Long Island City, Queens, but apparently not all of the devices were analyzed, sources said.

Federal prosecutors, who took over the case from the Queens district attorney's office, are expected to bring additional charges against Randazzo based on the newest findings.

The latest stomach-churning complaint, unsealed in Brooklyn Federal Court, contains transcripts of sex chats between Randazzo and the Massachusetts woman.

On July 5, 2011, the woman sent Randazzo a photo depicting her face and breasts.

"Omg, now I know why (the victim) is in love with them," Randazzo responded.

The complaint does not specify the woman's exact relationship with the boy, only that she had "regular access" to him and he stayed overnight at her home.

"He sleeps like a rock," she texted on Sept. 10, 2011.

"I would want you to give him NyQuil anyways," Randazzo allegedly replied.

"This way he's sleeping and you can move him around, etc."

There is no indication that Randazzo traveled to visit the woman in Massachusetts.

After she was arrested, the woman admitted to federal agents that she had sexually abused the boy during video chats with Randazzo in 2011 and 2012, according to court papers.

The woman also said that on more than one occasion, she doped the victim with Ambien, Benadryl and melatonin to put him into a deep sleep, according to the papers.

Randazzo's lawyer declined to comment on the latest arrest.

The cop, a 15-year-old veteran of the Midtown North Precinct, is suspended without pay.

Randazzo was first arrested on state charges of having 23 despicable pictures of children as young as 1 involved in lewd acts.

While out on bail, he allegedly downloaded about 30 videos of child pornography.

Randazzo is being held without bail at Metropolitan Detention Center.
