

LIVE BROADCAST: Live @ Five

Hon Crimetracker

3 days ago
CRIMETRACKER

Former Rushville police officer charged with misconduct over relationship with teen girl

Comments (11)

SHARE THIS UPDATE

Tweet +1 Share

Ads by Google

Arrest Records: 2 Secrets

1) Enter Name and State. 2) Access Full Background Checks Instantly.

InstantCheckmate.com

RUSH COUNTY – A former Rushville police officer has been arrested after state police say he had an inappropriate relationship with a teenage girl.

State police said the investigation started in August 2012 after the Rushville City Police Department contacted them about allegations against the officer, 28-year-old Cale Worley.

Worley was arrested late Friday on a warrant for felony official misconduct (class D felony) and contributing to the delinquency of a minor (class A misdemeanor). According to court documents, Worley sent the 15-year-old girl messages on Facebook and via texts.

The former DARE officer for the department, Worley worked in Rushville Community Schools,

ADVERTISEMENT

YOU'RE GETTING SCROOGLED!

Outlook.com Find out how →

Ads by Google

Top 10 Web Host Rankings

Find the Top 10 Web Hosting Brands We Rank the best Web Hosting

www.approvedhosts.com

YOU MIGHT ALSO LIKE

STORIES

VIDEOS

Muncie trash collector rescues puppy found in garbage bag

Greenwood shooting suspect, victim identified where he first encountered the 15-year-old girl. Police said he met with her after hours and communicated with her electronically. Worley resigned from his position in August when the original investigation began.

The case was turned over to prosecutors in November.

According to court documents, the girl's uncle originally reported his concerns about interaction with Worley. The girl's father also said he knew his daughter had exchanged text messages with the officer.

The girl's father said he saw Worley's patrol car "parked behind the old Whitefelt building" one night and then discovered "that his daughter was not there as she should have been," court documents said. When his daughter returned, she admitted that she had been with him.

The girl said she first texted Worley after getting in trouble for an earlier incident. She said she would "Facebook message and text message with Worley and that Worley had given her his cell phone number." They met behind the Junior High School and she "also drove around in Worley's patrol car," court documents said.

The teen said she talked to Worley about her "sex life" and other topics. On March 28, 2012, she said Worley picked her up in his squad car between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. The girl was on juvenile probation at the time, and being away from home without permission and past curfew are both juvenile delinquency offenses. "Worley was on duty and in full police uniform that night," according to court documents.

Worley didn't report his meetings with the girl, even though officers are required by department rules to log any meetings with juveniles after curfew. Rushville police also said Worley had a key to the loading dock at the school.

The girl said their relationship ended after the March 28 meeting.

Ads by Google

Exercise Your Brain

Games You Didn't Know Existed to Fight Brain Decline and Aging.

www.lumosity.com

PDF Comparison Software

Compare revisions easily. View differences side by side. Trial.

www.bluebeam.com

Comments (11)

Login

Sort by: Date Rating Last Activity

 Raditude · 3 days ago -1

Oh, now we're censoring anything anti-government?

Reply 2 replies · active 3 days ago

 I am you · 3 days ago 0

They do that

Reply

 ClanSmokeJaguar 57p · 3 days ago 0

You foil heads crack me up.

Reply

 I am you · 3 days ago +4

Another fine example of what our police really do. At least he wasn't robbing people?

Police: Man left son alone inside car while he went to smoke...

News of south side explosion reaches Sandy victims on east c...

POPULAR VIDEOS

Video Shot: Solving Rubik's Cube While Juggling It

