

Atlanta police officer accused of public indecency at Lenox Mall

Dyana Bagby Sep 13, 2016

An Atlanta Police officer is under investigation after being accused last month of public indecency at Lenox Square Mall.

Officer Jimmy Currie is accused of exposing himself to a minor Aug. 19 in a restroom at the mall. Currie is at home with pay while the department's Office of Professional Standards conducts an investigation, said a police spokesperson.

"The Atlanta Police Department takes these allegations very seriously. Chief [George] Turner has always prioritized officer accountability and honesty, and will continue to take decisive action when necessary to hold his employees to the highest standard," Officer Kim Jones said in a statement.

According to a police report, the son of a mall security guard reported a man exposed himself and fondled himself in the bathroom in the food court.

Currie is assigned to Zone 4 in southwest Atlanta. He has been with the APD since 2001.