

Dayton airport police sergeant indicted for old child sex crime

A Dayton Airport Police sergeant has been indicted for one count of gross sexual imposition against a child younger than 13, according to Friday's Montgomery County Common Pleas Court indictment list.

Sgt. Christopher Mohn, 43, was indicted for the third-degree felony but no arrest warrant was issued. Mohn was issued a summons to appear at a May 3 arraignment in Montgomery County Common Pleas Court.

The case brought by Huber Heights police involved what prosecutors called a "late disclosure" and that the charges stem from alleged incidents between Oct. 31, 1997 and July 11, 1998.

Mohn was promoted to sergeant in 2012, according to a City of Dayton video. That video said Mohn also had served as a corrections officer at the Dayton Human Rehabilitation Center.

Court records show Mohn, who has been on administrative leave, was located at a residence on Sparkhill Drive in Dayton.

A City of Dayton spokeswoman said they didn't have any immediate comments.
